The sampler to sampler consistency flags were based on comparing the difference between the high and low value for co-located measurements of a parameter (including FRM mass). For each site these differences might all be very small or large with considerable variation. The flags indicate the extremes for the site. Hence, a difference that was flagged at one site may not be flagged at another. The flags were combined into an alphanumeric code that indicated which parameter (s) caused the flag. After the RTI flagged data was removed, there were 45 out of 1, 072 site-day combinations with data that were flagged with discrepancies in at least two species. In most of the modeling analyses the modeling was done both with and without the flagged data. Some modeling was also done with certain sites removed, since the outliers tended to cluster by site. For the most part there was not an appreciable difference in the outcomes, because there is generally enough data to average out the outliers. All of the results and summaries referenced in this report are based on using data from all sites. As noted, the results and summaries are either based all non RTI flagged data (i. e. , all valid data) or data that were not flagged by either Battelle or RTI. 2. 2 EXPLORATORY ANALYSES Many of the graphs generated during the exploratory analysis for...
